Rietheim-Weilheim, Germany, August 2022 – Anyone operating an excavator or combine harvester needs to concentrate on the building site or field in question without becoming distracted by complicated control systems or tedious handling. Marquardt's new Intelli Controls product family offers exceptionally intuitive and safe control units, which feel good and look good too. The dust and water resistant components are easily integrated into the systems of agricultural and construction machinery, into those of commercial, leisure and electric vehicles as well as into boats. Public utility vehicles such as snow clearers, street cleaning machinery and Unimogs also benefit from this technology as do excavators, front-end loaders, cranes and other equipment used for handling materials.

Benefits for manufacturers

The mechatronics expert flexibly adapts its products to specific customer requirements with regard to functionality and design. All four versions within the Intelli Controls product family operate using a modular technology platform, and a function-optimised combination of hardware and software ensures they are highly configurable in terms of control concept and desired functionality. The units are compact, robust and flush-mounted.

Each Intelli Controls unit has between four and six buttons, which Marquardt also offers in combination with a rotary dial. The rotary dial and button layout can be adapted to needs, specifications and dashboard design on request.
